

4. models of Disability

Views disability as...	Biomedical	Social	Cultural	De/colonial
Locates impairment/disability in...	a pathology	a social construct	a power construct and a lived experience	deilitation (harm-inflicted)
Emphasizes...	the individual	built environment and society	cultures and contexts, including identity	conditions (trauma, exploitation, subjugation)
	intervention, restoration to "normal" (cure)	equal access (rights)	problematizing "normal", change (expression)	(psychological) decolonization, resistance, liberation, solidarity

The People Who Made This

Caroline Atwood

Escaped theme park animatronic assisted by chaotic paws

Phillip Bonanno

is a dog dad, ball thrower, and teacher (in that order).

Kristina Bowers

Kristina is a tired grad student and wife.

Cora Butcher-Spellman

Cora is sick and tired of being sick and tired. >:(

Talia Kibsey

Is a member of a speed-puzzling team that never wins but is always best-dressed.

Becca Ruger

Failed court jester (in need of a nap)

Dana Walden

Is hot. (In all senses of the word, all the time.)

TIPS FOR INSTRUCTORS

Learn to use captioning

Share access info and policy with students asap

Rethink movement-based activities

Check material digital accessibility

Find accessible bathroom routes

fix presentation fonts

Learn site lighting systems

Arrive early to arrange site for access

Identify class access routes

Contact Students early

Creating Accessibility Before the First Class

10 BIG suggestions!

Do not support those who might attempt to fake a service dog as it harms real service dog teams.

Minimize starting conversations about dead dogs or disabling events, which can be traumatizing for handlers to have daily.

Service dogs can be any breed and perform a variety of tasks based on physicality. Do not discredit a service dog from a unique breed simply from breed alone.

It is acceptable to ask what tasks/work the service dog conducts, but rude to ask about the specifics of the handler's disabilities or diagnosis.

Do not be alarmed or stare if a service dog makes actions to alert or assist their handler, including nosing, pawing, or single barks.

Supervise children and pets to prevent interactions and distractions of service dog. Dog attacks are one of the main reasons service dogs retire early.

Provide handler-dog teams the extra space needed to navigate and occupy space as two beings.

Speak to the handler, not the dog. Unless given explicit permission.

Do not touch, feed, or distract a service dog without permission from handler.

Basics of Service Dog Classroom Etiquette

Tips for Instructors and Classmates

10 things I hate about your classroom

1. when you leave the projector on but you're not even using it

2. when you bring snacks for the class that I can't eat

3. when there are tiny ass desks that I physically can't fit in

4. when there are loud noises--like video content and too many people talking at once

5. when you make it awkward to ask for accommodations

6. when there are overhead lights that make me want to die

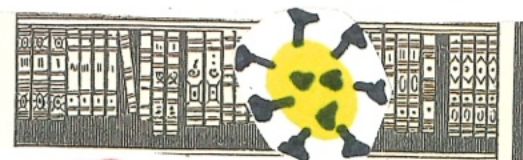

7. when class is moved outside--or any changes that happen on a whim

8. when it's too hot!! or when it's too cold!!

9. when you make a spectacle of my disabilities

10. when you don't listen to me about my needs

Students DON'T READ!!! Are they...

Are they really disabled by repeat COVID infections?

DON'T CARE...

STOP Making assumptions

Cripistemology

Centers the production of knowledge in the sick and disabled body, creating an alternative way of understanding the world that resists imperatives of cure.

Normal

Designates the "normal" body as one which is de facto included by built social environments (e.g. classrooms).

Sanism

A system of oppression against people who have mental or psychiatric disabilities; frequently pathologizes different ways of seeing the world as deviant and in need of cure.

UDL

Universal Design in Learning stresses multiple means of expression, action, and representation to accommodate as many learners as possible in any given environment.

Crip time

A nonlinear conception of time that resists normative and capitalist imperatives to produce.

Crip

Shortened and reclaimed from "cripple," "crip" signifies a theoretical framework that challenges normative embodiment, as well as a personal identity; emphasizes interdependence, subversion of social norms, and making the normal strange.

Bodymind

A term meant to designate how body and mind are not experienced as separate entities, but rather integrated.

Ableism

The systemic preference of able-bodiedness that materially, socially, and politically discriminates against disabled people.